The Conservative Government has helped to tackle crime by delivering tougher sentences for criminals and more resources for the men and women in law enforcement. The previous Government targeted law-abiding hunters, farmers and First Nations communities instead of criminals when they created the wasteful, ineffective and heavy-handed long-gun registry.

Canadians deserve safer streets and the long-gun registry has done little for public safety. Speaking before a Parliamentary committee this spring, Chief Rick Hanson of the Calgary Police Service called the long-gun registry “little more than a placebo for the serious crimes that occur on the street” because criminals don’t bother to register their firearms. Detective Sergeant Murray Grismer of the Saskatoon Police Service told the same committee that the registry “risks the safety of front-line police officers across Canada” because it is filled with “errors and inaccurate data.”

I will vote to scrap the long-gun registry.
